Title:Cycling

Have you ever heard the saying "It's as easy as riding a bike?" People say that when they mean that once you learn to ride a bike, you can remember how to do it easily. You don't have to think hard about balancing, pedaling, and all the things you think about as you are learning. At our den and pack meetings, we repeat things like the Scout Oath & Law because we want these things to become a part of who you are. We want them to be something you can do easily without really thinking about it. That is why we practice saying them and talk about the Scouting values like being trustworthy, friendly, and obedient over and over, so that these things become "as easy as riding a bike" to each one of you.
