Title: Fishing

Who here has told a fish story? I know I have. Around the campfire, we laugh as the fish get bigger, the rapids rougher, and the bears taller. We know it's all in fun.

But not all fish stories are funny. Some are lies—what I call minnows and whoppers.

Minnows are the “little white lies” that seem harmless. Maybe you say you did your good turn today, even if you didn't. No big deal, right?

But every minnow makes it easier to tell a bigger lie. And those whoppers can hurt others—and yourself.

A Scout is trustworthy. So stick to the truth. Because minnows have a way of growing into whoppers.
