

SPORTS CELEBRITIES KNOWN FOR GOOD SPORTSMANSHIP

Muhammad Ali (Boxing):

Muhammad Ali, one of the greatest boxers of all time, showed sportsmanship in various ways. One notable example is the “Rumble in the Jungle” fight against George Foreman in 1974. Despite the intense buildup and trash talk before the bout, Ali displayed immense respect for Foreman after defeating him. Ali held Foreman up, hugged him, and reassured him. This act of compassion and respect for his opponent endeared Ali to fans worldwide.

Tom Brady (American Football):

Tom Brady, a quarterback with multiple Super Bowl victories, is known for sportsmanship. After a loss in Super Bowl LII, Brady sought out and congratulated the winning Philadelphia Eagles quarterback, Nick Foles, with genuine admiration. Despite the disappointment of losing, Brady prioritized showing respect for the opposing team.

Serena Williams (Tennis):

Serena Williams has displayed sportsmanship on numerous occasions. In the 2013 French Open, she faced off against opponent Virginie Razzano. After Razzano experienced emotional moments on the court, Serena offered her a warm hug at the net, displaying empathy and understanding.
